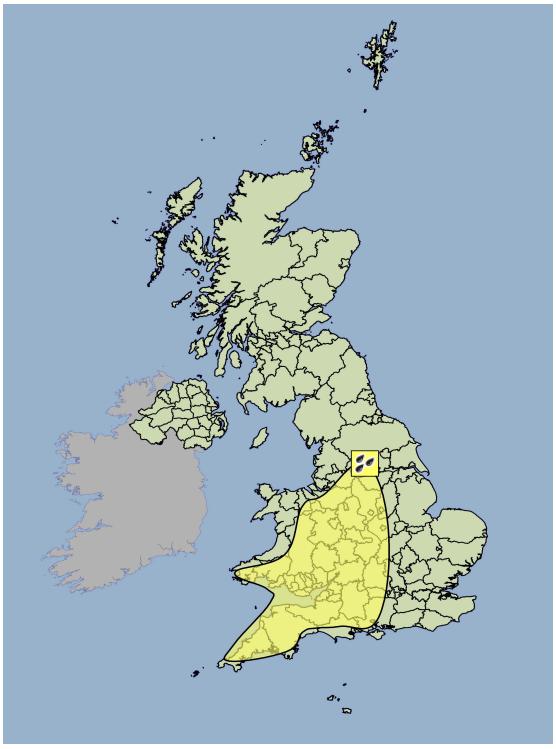
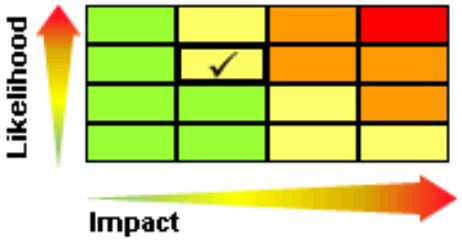
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A complex area of low pressure is generating areas of heavy rain at present, with the brighter skies that follow then encouraging formation of thundery showers into the afternoon. These may produce in excess of 10 mm of rain in an hour, with a few areas seeing 30 mm or so in just a few hours. These larger totals are most likely in parts of the southwest and south Wales, where the showers are slow-moving. Not everywhere will receive the heavy showers and thunderstorms but where they do occur, surface water may affect travel.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 09:00 on Sat, 24th May 2014 until 20:00 on Sat, 24th May 2014

Areas of heavy rain and thundery showers will affect parts of southern and central Britain during the rest of Saturday. The public should be aware that this may cause local disruption, primarily to Bank Holiday travel and outdoor events.

This is an update of the warning issued on Friday, now extended west across Cornwall and a little further east across central southern England.
